

Tiny Purple Butterflies

Tiny purple butterflies
dancing all around Here and there, flutter sweet scarcely make a sound.
While the red and tired sun whispers its goodbye
I sit still, content to watch those tiny butterflies.
As I watch them framed by sky
I start to elevate
I taste the joy they long to share as they celebrate
The smallest of the butterflies comes forth to greet me now, Landing lightly on my nose
The others gather round “Hello little butterfly,”
I coo with awed smile “Good to see you here once more, It’s really been a while.”
I hear the littlest butterfly answer like a breeze
We talk all night until the sun bids me time to leave.
So I leave those sugar fairies
To dance to haunting song
As I walk, they send me off

Swish. and I am gone.
